3. Best execution

The best execution shall be ensured by taking all the necessary measures to achieve the best possible result for its Clients when the Bank executes orders or responds to request-for-quotes from Clients, given the below mentioned factors and criteria.

In case the Client submits a specific instruction along with the trading order/ request-for-quote, the Bank shall execute the order or shall respond to the request-for-quote in accordance with the instruction given. When acting based on specific instructions received from Clients, the Bank may find itself in a situation where it is no longer able to take all the measures described in the Execution Policy to achieve the best possible result for its Clients.

The Bank warns its Clients that any specific instructions received may prevent it from adhering to the criteria established and implemented in its Execution Policy with the purpose to obtain the best possible result in executing the orders/ provision of quotes.

Irrespective of any legal obligation, the Bank shall maintain high standards of integrity and correctness when executing Client orders or responding to Client request-for-quotes, always considering the Client interests.

The Client may request the Bank, in writing, to provide evidence regarding the execution of orders/ provisions of quotes in accordance with the Execution Policy, the Bank having thus the obligation to provide such explanations to the Client via a letter or on the Client latest e-mail address provided to the Bank when filling in the registration / data update forms.

4. Factors and criteria considered to ensure the best execution

The way in which the execution factors are part of the overall sufficient measures to achieve the best possible result for the Client is described below.

In view of obtaining the best result in executing Client orders or responding to their request-for-quotes (RFQs), the Bank shall consider the market price as the main factor taking into account the probability of execution and settlement of the transaction, as well as the speed of execution under the accommodation of trading fees and margins at an optimal level corresponding to the traded volumes - offering an optimal and non-discriminatory price to the client in relation to market prices at the time of trading.

Raiffeisen Bank S.A. • Bank's headquarters in FCC Office Building, Calea Floreasca No. 246 D, District 1, Bucharest • Postal code 014476 • Romania • Phone: +40 21 306 1000 • Fax: +40 21 230 0700 • E-mail: centrala@raiffeisen.ro • www.raiffeisen.ro • Unique registration code 361820 • Trade Registry No. J1991000044406 • EUID ROONRC.J1991000044406 • Banking Registry No. RB-PJR-40-009/1999 • FSA Capital Markets Public Registry no. From an execution point of view, an order is assessed based on the market price which reflects the expectations and interest of the Clients.

Regarding the derivative financial instruments that are not traded on a regulated market, we point out that the closing price or the rate of such derivative contract depends, among others factors, on the credit risk rating of the Client (with impact on the credit value adjustment, CVA). Therefore, the same financial product offered to two Clients with different CVAs will have two different final prices. The same principle is valid also in case a Client addresses two intermediaries requesting for a quotation for the same product; the CVA of each Client will depend on the portfolio the Client has with each of the two intermediaries. As an example, if a new transaction generates a reduced overall risk of the portfolio held with an intermediary, but not with the client's portfolio held at another intermediary, the CVA factor will be lower at the first intermediary and higher at the second.

Consequently, the best execution in terms of price means the assessment of the net price paid by the Client, which include all specific costs for that particular Client, depending on his/her credit risk assessment, the client's portfolio of financial instruments held in custody at the Bank, the level of collateral provided by the Client (portfolio collateralization), etc.

Both for Retail and Professional Clients, ensuring the best result shall consider the price criteria, considering the probability of execution and settlement of the transaction, as well as the speed of execution.

5. Execution venues and intermediaries

The Bank does not access all execution venues simultaneously where a specific financial instrument is traded. For the execution of orders / provision of quotes to Clients, the Bank accesses those trading venues for which a technical and economic analysis has been carried out based on selection criteria including, but not limited to, availability of financial instruments, registration and maintenance costs as participant, technical registration mechanisms and the number of participants in trading the financial instruments.

At the date of this policy, the Bank trades with its retail and/or professional Clients, based on its offer of financial instruments, as follows:

- outside of a trading venue (OTC over the counter) with the express consent of the Client, in view of obtaining the best result for its Clients, based on the best execution policy and according to the contract signed by the Client. - on a multilateral trading facility (MTF);

- on regulated markets (RM).

In order to consistently achieve a high level of quality in executing orders and/or responding to Client request-for-quotes, the Bank shall provide prices, rates or quotes and shall execute orders, with priority, from its own books.

In case a Client requests the execution of an order related to a specific financial instrument in such a way that it is not accommodated by the Bank in its Client Execution Policy, the Bank shall assess on a case-by-case basis if it can execute the order in accordance with the Client instruction, without jeopardizing its own Execution Policy. If the Bank appreciates that the Client's specific instruction may affect its own Order execution policy and, consequently the interests of its Clients, the Bank shall alert the Client accordingly. In addition, the Bank shall decide on a case-by-case basis whether to refuse the execution of the Client's order in accordance with their instructions, in order to avoid any possible conflict of interest regarding its own Execution Policy.

The Bank informs the Client about the place of execution by indicating the MIC code (market identification code) of the respective place of execution within the execution of the transaction confirmation.

In case of executing transaction with derivative financial instruments on the Bloomberg Trading Facility Europe trading venue, the MIC code indicated in the transaction confirmation is BTFE (Bloomberg Trading Facility Europe).

In the case of executing a transaction with shares, details about the place of execution can be found in the transaction confirmation (MIC code, name of the place of execution).

7. Placement and management of orders and/or quotations of Clients

Request-for-quotes – RFQ

The Bank trades with its Clients mainly through the Request-for-Quote method (RFQ).

Trading based on RFQ is a trading method where the Client can approach an intermediary or trading venue and request a price or quote for a particular financial instrument they intent to buy or sell.

RFQ involves requesting a firm price/ quotation from a market participant to another market participant.

The Bank shall inform the Clients about the trading method of the respective financial instrument and hereby advises the Client via the present document, the fact that there is a difference between providing a purely non-binding price inquiry ("indicative request") and a request for quote (RFQ).

A non-binding price request is for information purposes only, whereby the Client is not interested in trading based on the quotation obtained.

The Bank shall request the Client to express their intention (to trade or not based on the quotation provided) when requesting a quotation.

Upon receiving a quotation request from a Client, the personnel within the Capital Market Sales Department shall provide the Client, as quickly as possible, with a price (bid/ask), and the Client has the option to accept or reject the offered price. The response time depends on the type of financial instrument for which a RFQ is placed, as well as its liquidity and the size of the order.

Trading involves the Client interacting with the bank via recorded phone calls or through trading platforms. The execution of RFQ can take place, depending on the quoted financial instrument, as follows:

- via Bloomberg trading venue MTF;
- outside of a trading venue (OTC over the counter).

RFQ via a trading venue

The Client requests the Bank to provide a quotation using the technical means available by the respective trading venue. The Client shall provide the Bank with all necessary information, so that the Bank can, in turn, provide a quotation for the specific financial instrument.

The Client requests the Bank to provide a quotation through one of the following communication means: recorded phone call, chat, or through over communication channels agreed upon in the contractual basis. The Bank's representative within the Capital Market Sales Department (CMSD) takes the quotation request from the Client and transmits to the Client the tradable (i.e. binding) quotation of the requested financial instrument. The Client may either reject or accept the offered price.

RFQ outside of a trading venue

The Client requests the Bank to provide a quotation through one of the following communication means: recorded phone calls, chat or through other communication channels agreed upon in the contractual basis. The Client shall provide the Bank with all the necessary information for the Bank to offer a price quotation.

The responsible person from the Capital Markets Sales Department shall provide the Client with the price for the requested transaction. The Client decides whether to accept or reject the offered price.

The Bank informs the Client about the risks associated with executing orders outside of a trading venue through the MIFID II presentation document, which can be accessed on the bank's website www.raiffeisen.ro in the section despre-noi/guvernanta-corporativa/mifid, link: https://www.raiffeisen.ro/ro/despre-noi/guvernanta-corporativa/mifid.html and, upon the client's request, provides additional information regarding the consequences of these execution methods.

Regarding the transmission of orders for shares to trading venues, the Bank uses an automated and secure connection with the trading systems of the Bucharest Stock Exchange (BVB) and Raiffeisen Bank International (RBI). This connection allows for the rapid and standardized transmission of orders, confirmations, and cancellations, ensuring the integrity and traceability of the execution process.

8. Execution of Client orders / quotations by financial instruments classes

Fixed income financial instruments – Bonds

The Bank provides its Clients execution services based on RFQ for corporate bonds, municipal bonds, and government bonds, both local and foreign. For certain financial instruments, the Bank acts as primary dealer. The fixed income instruments are offered to certain types of the Banks' Clients based on its distribution strategy.

The Bank trades fixed income financial instruments such as corporate bonds, municipal bonds through a trading venue, such as an MTF, and with regards to government bonds outside of trading venues based on the express consent of the Client and in counterparty with the Bank's own account, in counterparty with Raiffeisen Bank International (RBI) A.G., with headquarters in Austria, Vienna 1030, Am Stadtpark Street no 9 , MIC Code RBIV and LEI 9ZHRYM6F437SQJ6OUG95 (RBI) or, in exceptional cases, in counterparty with a third party. For transactions with bonds - type financial instruments issued by the Romanian Ministry of Public Finance on the external market, Romanian Government Bonds (ROMANI), quotations are provided by the Bank to its Clients using RBI as the counterparty for obtaining the quotation and instruments, or in exceptional cases in counterpart with a third party. Transactions are carried out through the request-for-quotes (RFQ) method.

The Client has the obligation to specify the exact quantity of financial instruments for which they are requesting a price quotation.

The most important factor considered in the executing of transactions with fixed income financial instruments is the price level, regardless of the Client classification (Retail or Professional), also considering the probability of execution and settlement of the transaction, as well as the speed of execution. Therefore, regarding transactions with bonds and/or government securities executed outside a trading venue, the defining criterion considered by the Bank is the price, by comparing the execution price with the price of the same financial instrument traded in a trading venue or with the price of another financial instrument with similar characteristics to the initial instrument. This factor is considered on accommodating the fees and transaction margins charged to the Client by the Bank at an optimal level that corresponds to the traded volumes.

The Client may contact the Bank to conclude bonds transactions, via Bloomberg or via recorded phone call, chat, or the FWR/ Premium Invest Client Relationship Manager.

The evaluation factor of execution quality is the yield/price level, considering the probability of execution and settlement of the transaction, as well as the speed of execution.

The Client can contact the Bank to conclude transactions with treasury certificates through Bloomberg or via recorded phone calls, chat, or the FWR/ Premium Invest Client Relationship Manager, with the transaction being executed outside of trading venue based on the express consent of the Client.

Money market financial instruments are distributed to specific segments of Clients, as per the Bank's distribution strategy.

The evaluation factor of execution quality is the price level, considering the probability of execution and settlement of the transaction, as well as the speed of execution.

Derivative financial instruments with underlying exchange rate

Within this category of financial instrument, the Bank trades with its Clients FX swap and FX forward contracts. The Bank does not trade exchange rate FX futures and FX options admitted for trading in a trading venue.

The Bank trades these types of financial instruments via MTF.

Outside of a trading venue (OTC – over the counter), the Clients may trade FX deliverable forward offered by the Bank via recorded phone calls and which are not considered financial instruments (being categorized as means of payments).

The trading model for such financial instruments is RFQ with the Bank as the counterparty, regardless of the venue.

The evaluation factor for the quality of execution of transactions with derivative financial instruments is the price level, irrespective of the type of Client. The response time to an RFQ depends on the liquidity, type and nature of the specific financial instrument. The more complex or illiquid the financial instrument is, the longer the response time to the Client's quotation request.

The costs charged to the Clients include the following elements:

- An adjustment cost (xVA) applicable to all transactions with derivative financial instruments not traded on a regulated market (over the counter) which includes:
  a) – counterparty credit risks (CVA);
  b) – funding costs (FCA) if the case;
  c) – capital costs (KVA) if the case.
- Operational costs (costs related to back-office transaction processing, settlement costs, etc.)

The adjustment cost for counterparty credit risks differs for each Client depending on the Client's rating and the product portfolio held by the Client with the Bank.

Operational costs are the same for each Client.

Regarding the distribution of fund units issued by local and/or external open-ended investment funds, the Banks provides the service of order taking from the Clients and transmission for execution to the Raiffeisen Asset Management (RAM) / management companies.

For local and external funds, the issuance and cancellation of fund units are not the responsibility of the Bank, but strictly the responsibility of the Manager of those funds and are carried out according with their own detailed procedures outlined in the prospectuses related to each investment fund.

Share-type financial instruments are offered to certain segments of the Bank's clients according to its distribution model.

A "market order" is executed immediately at the price available in the market at the time it is placed. A "limit order" is executed only at a specified price or at a better price.

For financial instruments traded on the regulated market or MTFs managed by the Bucharest Stock Exchange S.A., where RBRO is a participant in the trading system, specific orders/instructions received from the client will be executed (order elements: the market where the order is placed, direction, symbol, validity, type of order: limit or market). The client is informed that, in these cases, the bank is not obliged to compare execution conditions with other trading venues or to apply best execution criteria.

For financial instruments traded on external markets, RBRO receives client orders and transmits them for execution to Raiffeisen Bank International, an authorized intermediary to trade directly or through other intermediaries. Orders are executed in accordance with RBI's Order Execution Policy, and the client is responsible for informing themselves about this policy. With respect to Clients' participation in initial and secondary public offerings of shares IPO & SPO and in accelerated bookbuild offerings ABB, the Bank may act, as the case may be, as intermediary, placing agent or collecting agent, by receiving Clients' orders/subscriptions and submitting them for allocation and settlement in accordance with the offer documentation and the instructions of the lead manager or of the issuer. In such situations, the best execution principle does not apply and takes into account the specific nature of the offers, in particular the fact that the price and terms are determined within the framework of the offer and not through the usual secondary market trading mechanisms, and that allocation may be partial or may not occur at all, depending on demand and on the criteria set out in the offer documentation.

The Bank does not charge any fee or commission and does not receive any non-monetary benefit from any third party for the execution of orders from its Clients at a specific execution venue or for transmission of client orders to any third party for execution at a specific execution venue ('payment for order flow')

By way of exception, rebates or discounts in transaction fees at execution venues shall be allowed under the approved and publicly pricing structure of a trading venue within the Union or a third country trading venue, provided that these are exclusively for the benefit of the client.
